

SUGGESTIONS FOR HOME DECORATION

To the Home Makers of Our Country
This Book is Dedicated

¶ The Illustrations presented in the following pages are designed as a means of obtaining good and consistent decoration at moderate cost.

¶ Our suggestions, as conveyed by the colored plates, cover the widest possible variety of arrangement, and represent every method of modern decoration.

¶ It is not, however, requisite that the exact material shown in our illustrations should always be employed as there are hundreds of patterns in the collection that will produce equally satisfactory results—and, while rooms decorated in accordance with our examples will give constant pleasure to their owners—there is practically no limit to the variations that can be introduced.

¶ The line of samples, of which these plates reproduce but a very small proportion, is the largest assortment ever offered the public, and contains the most artistic designs and colorings that can be obtained, including not only the finest productions of domestic artists but also a variety of high class patterns of European origin.

¶ For the advancement of correct home-decoration, we maintain a special Decorative department and this department is at the command of any who wish to take advantage of its services throughout the year, such service being rendered entirely free of charge.

¶ To Our Representatives: To obtain greater variety in our illustrations we make use of a number of patterns that are not shown in the regular sample set.

¶ All patterns not included in the regular set are indicated by the letters "Sp" following the pattern numbers. The special book, or portfolio, containing these "Sp" patterns and also a large number of high grade decorative hangings, is sent out to our representatives upon a time limit, or, if furnished with the numbers of "Sp" patterns required, we will take care that samples of such are promptly supplied.

¶ Where wood coves or rails are shown in the plates we refer to the moulding board, upon the back of which will be found a wide assortment of such material.

¶ With each plate is given in letter press a description of the various parts employed in the arrangement and we ask a careful reading of these descriptions—not only for the better understanding of the line and its possibilities—but to render unnecessary very many letters of inquiry received each year, the points covered by such letters being, generally, explained in the book itself.

SPRING

A Theatrical Auditorium Dramatic, Vaudeville or Moving Picture

¶ The arrangement here submitted presents an imposing ensemble, our artists having spared no pains to make this the most attractive interior yet placed before the profession, and by the liberal employment and judicious use of high class decorative material, domestic and also imported, we feel that their efforts have been successful in the highest degree.

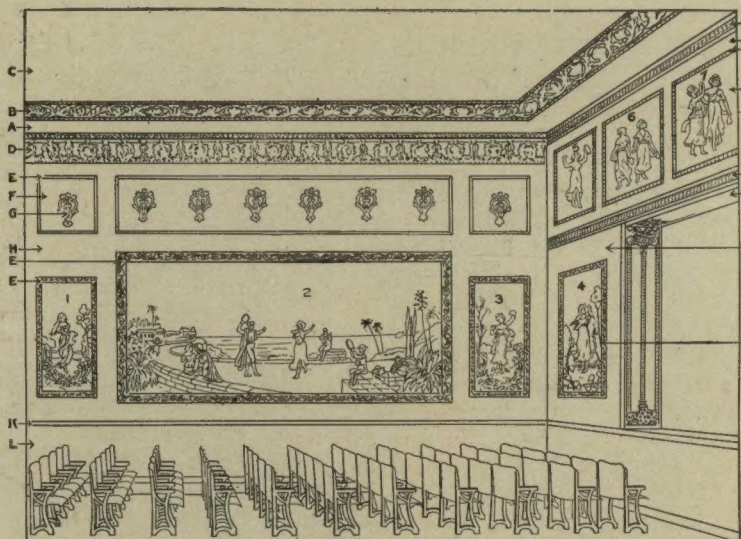

¶ It is not essential that this example should be literally followed out; there can be changes and modifications introduced, these being controlled by the size of the auditorium or by the amount to be expended upon the work, but we may frankly say that the fewer the changes the better will be the final result.

¶ The Dance and Seasons panels are of Parisian execution, hand painted, by artists of high standing, and are superior to any work of this class that has yet been introduced to the American public.

¶ Samples of material illustrated will be furnished as far as practicable; also further details, if such be required.

¶ Suggestions, plans, etc., free of charge.

WINTER

A Dining Room

¶ The frieze, Autumn Leaves, a masterpiece of design and coloring.

¶ The "Fall of the Year" never had a better exemplification through the agency of an artist's palette.

¶ This frieze is forty-two inches high and the section five feet long; one section after the other can be hung continuously around a room or each section can be used as field for a panel, some plain material, preferably Holz-Mehl, serving as stiling, the panel being finished with a simple decorative band.

¶ The lower wall is of Aerochrome, a marvelous blending of colors by the aid of the electric air brush. Novel in its effects, and taken into high favor by the leading decorators of the entire country immediately it was invented.

¶ This material is sixty inches wide, therefore the yard, as quoted, equals the surface of fifteen square feet.

¶ There is no matching, therefore if a greater height than sixty inches is required the strip must be hung vertically, with wood strips covering joints. Both the frieze and the Aerochrome are in oil colors, therefore can be cleansed with a damp cloth.

A Dining Room or Hall

Or for General Use

¶ This illustration presents an upper wall of Aerochrome (see Plate No. 2) with an artistically designed and colored frieze running along its entire length.

¶ The material, being sixty inches high and hung in horizontal strips, will cover any wall of ordinary height, as an upper finish, and if the wall should be unusually high the dado or wainscot can be increased in height to meet the lower line of the upper work. The dado, Lin-O-Wall, colored throughout, from foundation to face, in oils, therefore not affected by superficial injury; non-fading and practically imperishable. This material, the only perfect solid relief wall decoration, has almost entirely supplanted the older makes, those being open to many serious objections.

¶ Our example of Lin-O-Wall has been colored to bring it into line with the upper work. The first coat orange, the second coat green, this latter rubbed off the relief parts before drying. There is no special skill required to execute work of this character, a soft cloth being the only tool needed for the rubbing.

¶ One of the most important features in Lin-O-Wall is the fact that it requires no after treatment. The material is supplied in a great variety of colorings and unless, as in the present plate, it is desired to match an upper work, Lin-O-Wall is hung just as would be any good wall paper and the work is then complete.

A Hall

¶ Or could be advantageously used in other places with or without the dado which, however, for hall, dining room or library, is a good feature.

¶ The material employed is Holz-Mehl, as to ground work, with a thoroughly good pattern in shaded print. The high lights in crown are a pleasing feature, and taken as a whole this crown decoration is certain to win a high place in popular estimation.

¶ The dado repeats in pattern the upper wall but with a darker tone, and the crown is used as rail.

¶ The circular ornaments upon ceiling have been cut from the crown used as dado rail.

¶ An entirely original and pleasing treatment. Simple in application and resulting in an exceptionally good wall.

¶ It will be perceived that the two colorings shown in this plate are of the same pattern, the brown being used at each end of a wall and continued as a frieze above the green. The cutting out and matching of the patterns is a very simple matter.

Or Other Use

¶ The frieze, Venice, copied from a celebrated painting and reproducing every line and tone of its famous original.

¶ Two sections, each five feet long, are required to complete the repeat. Height of frieze thirty inches.

¶ This frieze can be hung continuously around a room or laid off in panels each containing one or more sections.

¶ The wall, an original treatment of the popular clouded effect, worked up after "Tiffany" methods, and presenting an exceedingly rich decorative surface.

An Elizabethan or Paneled Room

¶ Is decorated with Litho-Grayn, a wall paper made in close imitation of wood, as principal motive, with sections of the new frieze, "Le Soir," (evening) and Aerochrome ornaments in panels.

¶ The ceiling is also of paper, a beamed wood effect being obtained by the use of decoration No. 3732 Sp.

¶ The arrangement of a room after the manner of our illustration is exceedingly simple, being only a matter of a few measurements, and the treatment can be adapted to any room regardless of its dimensions.

¶ While the reproduction of frieze "Le Soir" by no means brings out the exquisite coloring of its original, it will serve to illustrate, to a limited extent, the excellence and beauty of the work.

¶ The Aerochrome ornaments are hand wrought upon a blended ground and appropriately placed to afford variety and contrast in the general effect.

¶ For further examples of Aerochrome ornaments see Plate No. 38.

For General Use

¶ A Crown decoration, high lighted with gold, this, as we have to depend upon color only for our effects, being lost in the plate but in actual use it enriches the entire pattern.

¶ The landscape, in natural tones, is well designed and colored, giving diversity to the general scheme.

¶ The Dado, a close imitation of a woven fabric, with dashes of color worked in that add an appropriate contrast to the ground. The dado border, representing a moulding of wood, can be applied to block out the dado as shown in plate or used simply as rail for the upper finish.

A Living Room

¶ Or, with modifications, suitable for Library or Dining Room.

¶ A novel treatment, the open work enclosing panel being cut from the wall hanging.

¶ This hanging is a specially good example of mural decoration and can be used to cover an entire wall or as a dado of any required height or, with good effect, as here submitted. The ornament is an Aerochrome production painted in oils upon heavy paper ground. The landscape shown in this particular ornament is not duplicated in any of the others, therefore, if a number of the ornaments are used in a room each will present a different scene. A number of other ornaments of this class are illustrated upon Plate No. 37.

A Dining Room

¶ The Grape and Foliage Crown, as fine an example as has ever been presented. This Crown is sold already cut out, and so quoted. The Inlay of plain Holz-Mehl is of proper contrast, but the coloring may be varied at pleasure.

¶ The wall is eloquent, requiring no written praise, and the cutting out, as shown in plate, by no means a difficult matter; or this wall could be hung without the cutting out, an inlay being left between upper line of wall and lowest point of crown, but we should advise reproduction of our illustration.

For General Use

¶ A clever example of modern art held down to domestic requirements.

¶ Green is ever a favorite color with the public generally and this plate represents an exceptionally agreeable use of that color. A further coloring of this pattern will be found in Book E.

A Dining Room

¶ Upper wall in subdued colorings but having a distinct tone of welcome in its well balanced chromatic effects.

¶ The dado, a masterpiece of modeling, is of Lin-O-Wall, the very latest, and it may be safely added, the very best that has yet been produced.

¶ The pattern is a perfect reproduction of wood, plain and carved.

¶ The plate brings out the leading characteristics of the design, but there is much of the smaller detail lost in our reproduction as the original screen from which the plate is made is five feet wide and nine feet high.

¶ The Lin-O-Wall dado is about sixty inches high and the width of section nineteen and one-half inches. There are therefore about three sections shown in the plate.

A Parlor

¶ This method can be applied to apartments of any size, each entire side of room being thrown into one panel, as shown in plate.

¶ The wall hanging is an artistic design of exceptionally clever coloring.

¶ The dull red in flower supplies precisely the note required to vitalize the whole treatment, and the panel border completes a room that will have but few equals.

¶ We may add that the ceiling simulates, very closely, plaster work in relief.

Den Suggestions

Plate No. 14

¶ An effective arrangement showing a simple "cut out." The dado consists of two breadths, the upper breadth reversed, completing pattern.

Plate No. 15

¶ A new frieze, "El Dorado," occupies the place of honor, and deservedly so, for we consider this the most beautiful conception, in landscape work, that has ever been produced for mural decoration.

¶ The virility of composition and masterly handling of broad masses of color are beyond praise while the floral minutia shown in foreground of picture is well nigh microscopic in its fidelity to nature's handiwork.

¶ The height of El Dorado is forty-two inches. There are two sections required to complete the picture, each section being five feet long.

¶ Both sections—ten feet in all—are shown in panel, and these sections can be applied continuously around a room or paneled as we suggest in our plate.

¶ The wall decoration at ceiling angle fits well into the general scheme and the bands around panels are part of that decoration, as is also the band shown upon ceiling.

¶ Seven and one-half yards of crown and twenty-two yards of band to the roll.

¶ The dado consists of a crown—this crown being reversed at the base board—and a small section of the wall stripe shown between the two. This stripe can be used to increase the height of dado, if the height of the wall calls for such increase.

A Chamber

¶ A beautifully drawn and equally well colored representation of a popular flower, enclosed in a floral decoration of unusual merit, affording a good contrast.

¶ The decoration consists of seven and one-half yards of wide band, as shown at the top of plate, and twenty-two yards of the narrow band.

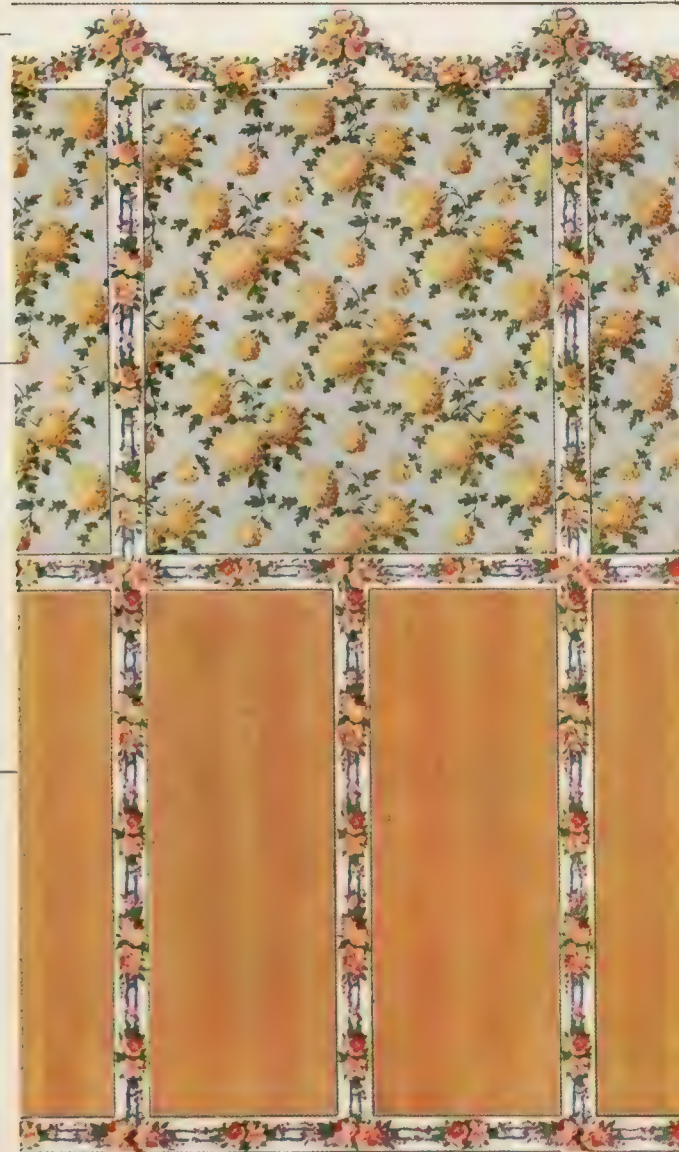

¶ The narrow, as a vertical line, repeats every nineteen inches, or can be omitted to make panels of any desired width.

¶ It will be perceived that one strip is omitted from the center of the upper panel in our plate.

A Library or Dining Room

Plate 18

¶ A novel cut out crown in rich Fall colorings. The wall of Holz-Mehl, a most satisfactory wall covering and far superior, from a decorative viewpoint, to any other plain material.

¶ The dado, Lin-O-Wall, the only perfect relief decoration for dados, wainscots or entire walls. Imperishable and artistic. Being colored in oil this material will not scratch or bruise. Further, it requires no after treatment as do so many of the older relief materials.

¶ We use Lin-O-Wall exclusively and it has our unqualified endorsement.

For General Use

Plate 19

¶ This plate shows an attractive method of hanging the decoration.

¶ The band above the crown is cut from the wall hanging and makes a very much better finish than would be obtained were the crown carried up to the ceiling line.

¶ A wood cove moulding can be substituted if preferred.

¶ The crown, a very beautiful design, can be used as suggested in our drawing, or all can be hung alike—crown at the top, base at the bottom of the wall.

¶ It will be perceived that, as we have arranged the wall, an entire crown and base are introduced as upper panel in center and another base at the foot of this same panel.

A Library

Plate 20

¶ An excellent woodland tapestry for panel field. A fine gold stitch effect adds greatly to the beauty of this coloring, but unfortunately, we are unable to show that feature in our drawing.

¶ The dado, a good complement to the tapestry field, also presents the characteristics of a woven stuff and frames in the panel very acceptably.

¶ This panel need not be of the proportions given on plate—an irregularity in that regard being very much better decoration than a constant repetition of one dimension.

The corners can be made either square or rounding, as shown at the top and bottom of plate. The bow-knots are applied to the outer edge of the panel and the buttons upon lattice work at the lower part.

¶ The ribbon, framing panel, is cut from inner edge of border. Our plate shows border with ribbon complete, but the border can be used as well, after ribbon is removed, for panelling purposes.

¶ The crown (two shown) is not sold cut out, but, if so preferred, can be cut out when used. The curved ribbons above the crowns are part of the crowns themselves, as also is the narrow ribbon running horizontally across the panel immediately below the crowns.

¶ The upper wall is a charmingly colored scene in Holland. The sections are twenty inches wide and sixty inches high. There are about two and one-half sections shown in plate. Two sections complete the view, making a repeat of forty inches, and it is intended that these sections should be hung continuously around the room.

¶ The wainscot is of Sanatile, an enameled material in strong relief, much more durable than a glazed earthenware tiling and costing but, about, one-fifth as much money.

¶ This wainscot is made up of two strips, hung horizontally, the upper strip or border being twenty-four inches wide and the base of same width. If a greater height is desired a Filler can be furnished to fit in between the border and base. This filler is eighteen inches wide but any number of strips can be used even to the covering of an entire wall.

¶ Sanatile is practically imperishable, it cannot peel, crack or chip, and can be cleansed with soap and water just as frequently as its owner wishes, without, in the slightest degree, affecting the beauty of its surface.

A Nursery or Play Room

¶ This attractive nursery wall is composed of a plain blue tint for upper, below that an extension section of the "Barnyard" frieze, consisting of just rails and bushes.

¶ The Nursery Rhymes follow, one section shown, consisting of two panels.

¶ The entire set of Nursery Rhymes comprises six sections, each section five feet long, making twelve of the small panels in all, and all different, giving a total length of thirty feet without repetition of subject. For other sections of this frieze see Plate No. 38.

¶ Any number of sections may be ordered, but as orders for less than the full roll of six sections are filled from broken sets, we cannot promise to supply any particular section upon such orders.

¶ The wall below the nursery rhymes is of a tan jaspe. The green is ingrain cut into such shapes as may be approved of when the work is being done.

¶ All animals, birds, butterflies, etc., in both the upper and lower part of this plate, are cut from one section of the "Kindergarten" panel. These panels or sections are five feet long and twenty inches high. There are two different sections to the complete set, the second section not shown here, but furnishing, with the section illustrated, enough cut outs for the decoration of an entire room.

¶ We supply the Kindergarten in complete sections only, not cut out.

El Boudoir

Or would make a very excellent Reception Room

Plate No. 26

¶ An exquisite room, decorated in the very latest manner and having, as the leading motive, a novel decoration that excels in originality and elegance any that has heretofore been designed. The outer edge of the wall is relieved by a plain blue ingrain, then follows the border, used with or without the ribbon inner edge. We show this border complete but, if economy has to be considered, the ribbon can be removed and used for edging the panels as in our illustration.

¶ The crown is hung square (not cut out), being finished at its lower part by a strip of ribbon; see Plate No. 25, this page.

¶ This interior shows two methods of paneling but if a plainer effect should be desired, the crowns can be run matching one on to the other around the entire room with a lower work of chambray, or a stripe or some small figured pattern.

¶ Plate No. 25 contains illustrations of three different colorings of Crowns; the one to the right being cut out as it has a special wall hanging to match. The other two crowns are furnished as shown in plate but can be cut out when the work is being done, if that finish is preferred. These two crowns can be applied upon any plain or striped or figured wall of appropriate coloring.

¶ The borders, with bowknots, corners and buttons printed upon same roll are colored for use with the crowns and allow of very many different arrangements being made with this decoration. The roll of border contains twenty-two yards of border, fourteen corners, fourteen bowknots, twenty-eight buttons.

A Brown Study

¶ Brown has a sedative influence and there is no color that can be more acceptably employed for library decoration, not that brown should be confined to that room only, it can be used in any part of a house with good results.

¶ The wall we submit is perfect in its way but, following this suggestion, there is no limit to the number of pleasing interiors that can be produced at moderate cost.

¶ Border three band twenty-two yards to roll.

A Blue Room

¶ Not required as frequently as many other colorings but, when wanted, nothing else will answer.

¶ The light demand for blue causes paper stainers to offer but few examples; however, in this plate we have a wall that is eminently satisfactory and can be duplicated, without doubt or hesitation, whenever a room of this particular color is prescribed.

¶ The work is simple, first the inlay, then the wall with its easy cut out; the ornaments that form the frieze can be placed at such intervals as may be approved of. The dado affords a very pleasant contrast to the upper wall and is finished with a wood rail.

A Living Room

¶ Well fitted for comfort without ostentation.

¶ This wall, with its matching crown, is good decoration and worked out in restful colors. The dado sustains its part of the scheme very acceptably, and is strengthened by the introduction of an occasional ornament cut from the crown.

¶ Ceiling decoration has thirty yards of band with sixteen corners to the roll.

¶ Dado rail, coloring much browner than shown in plate, and better fitted for its place, has twenty-two yards to the roll.

Novel Cut-Out Crowns

¶ Plates Nos. 30-31-32.

¶ These three plates contain a collection of novel cut-out crowns, each one of them of original design and coloring.

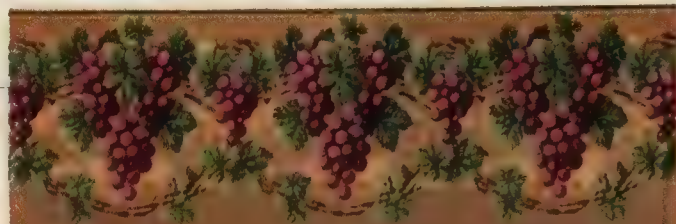

¶ These crowns are furnished already cut out and as the crown centers exactly upon the strip of wall hanging, it is far preferable, from a decorative standpoint, to an ordinary frieze which cannot be depended upon to center anywhere.

¶ Crown decorations have come to stay, their popularity increasing from year to year, and we offer them in profuse variety—Floral—Decorative—Fruit, etc., representing the best work of American and European artists.

¶ The special wall papers designed for use with the cut-outs shown in these plates will be found in Book E. See pattern numbers below cut-out quotations.

An Auditorium Designed for Religious Services

¶ We here present an Interior designed for Ecclesiastical use, although, with some slight modifications, the same arrangement could be well adapted to the decoration of other public interiors.

¶ In this example are combined many features of special excellence, secured by a judicious blending of the highest examples of ancient and modern art. This composition, the product of many years' experience in interior decoration, is submitted as embodying every detail that goes to produce a perfect result.

The Recess

¶ The decoration here shown, applied to a flat surface, presents the appearance of an actual recess several feet in depth, and is composed entirely of Paper-hangings, with the exception of the floral vista, that being of Parisian work, hand painted, in natural colors. The different parts of this arrangement are supplied in quantity sufficient to reproduce upon a wall, 9 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, the work shown upon plate, and with each order we furnish a plan which will enable the decorator to locate and hang, without difficulty, the separate parts of the decoration. The finished work, put together according to our plan, will give a perfect reproduction of the illustration, than which nothing more novel or attractive has ever been invented for ecclesiastical decoration. The Recess represents a space 9 feet 6 inches in width and 13 feet in height.

¶ The width cannot be changed as the arch, where it rests upon the capitals, is 9 feet $1\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide.

¶ The height can be increased or reduced but it is preferable, whenever practical, to make the decoration of the proportions given in plate.

¶ If height is not sufficient to allow of the entire decoration being introduced the arch and scroll may be omitted, making total height from 8 feet upwards—the upper finish being the capitals and extension as in plate, but, whenever space permits, the full decoration should be used. The larger Columns, also Arch and Scroll, are treated in one coloring only; gray with brown shadings.

¶ The smaller Columns, Caps, Bases, Extensions, Walls, etc., can be furnished in gray or in brown—the larger columns, arch and scroll, work with either coloring.

¶ Orders should read "Recess No. 1R" or such other number as may be wanted, when ordering it will be necessary to state color desired, Gray or Brown.

¶ Plate No. 33 gives detail of Decoration used in Plate No. 35. This decoration is novel, effective and thoroughly practical. It will be perceived, upon referring to Plate No. 35, that the space between columns can be increased or diminished at pleasure, an important feature.

¶ Plate No. 34. These Ceilings have been specially designed for use in Churches and Public Halls, and are the most effective patterns that we have ever introduced for that purpose.

¶ The band decoration on outer edges is made to match both colorings of ceilings. There are 15 yards of band $5\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide and 16 ornaments to the roll. This band gives the effect of actual relief, matching, in that regard, the ceiling patterns.
